

“All Summer in a Day” is a science-fiction story that takes place on the planet Venus, where it rains constantly and the sun only appears once every seven years. The main character, Margot, is locked in a closet by the other students who are jealous that she remembers the sun and they do not. The children enjoy the two hours of sunshine, playing, running and laughing in it, and forget that Margot is still locked in the closet. Once the rain starts again, the children return to their underground school and realize with dismay that Margot has missed it all because of their actions.
